

B&R for 14th February issue

By Margot Hollingdale

Our "Creative Writing" group gathered an eclectic selection of items to present to the whole group. They chose short stories written by former members over the past 40 years and a few of their own poems and compositions, attempting to show the importance of recording everyday life which has been such a rich source for research into times past.

The afternoon brought a surprise change from "Archaeology" to an erudite presentation by David Morgan who proved to be an excellent raconteur on the subject of Odysseus. "Family History" looked at the number of ancestors that one could hope to find within a family tree. "Art Appreciation" needed to be postponed so "Aspects of History" had an opportunity to continue with their subject of Palestine 1920 – 1948 and the "Play Reading" group have started tackling Hobson's Choice.

Tomorrow, Pharmacologist, Aidan Seeley will expound on the science behind cannabis. Special Interest Groups expand their learning in Art Appreciation, Philosophy, "What the Papers Say" and the continued reading of "Hobson's Choice".
